

CLAYTON H. RIDDELL
GRADUATE PROGRAM IN

POLITICAL MANAGEMENT

carleton.ca/politicalmanagement

“A groundbreaking degree, the first of its kind in Canada.”

SHAPE YOUR FUTURE

Are you passionate about Canadian politics? Do you want to have a hand in how we are governed? The partisan theatre of parliamentary democracy is exhilarating and profoundly important, but it requires staff equipped with tactical skills and strategic understanding, and mindful of their responsibilities to their fellow citizens. Carleton University has created Canada's first graduate program in Political Management. This intensive professionally oriented master's degree is designed to provide students with the foundation to pursue leadership roles in the political offices and parties of our nation.

The program is grounded in the academic understanding and critique of democratic processes and institutions, drawing on Carleton's longstanding strengths and faculty expertise in the analysis of Canadian politics and governance, voting behavior and electioneering, political communication, public opinion measurement and the design of persuasive campaigns. Adjunct faculty include some of the most accomplished Canadian political practitioners.

Core to the degree is an insistence on ethical behavior as a paramount guiding principle as well as mutual respect among political adversaries.

The Master of Political Management can be completed in 10 months of full-time study.

COURSEWORK

Coursework covers: strategic political communication, campaign management, formulating and implementing a policy agenda, crisis and issues management, political persuasion and the media, polling and opinion research, political ethics, the political policy landscape, political advocacy, managing staff and constituency offices and institutions, governance and the proper relation between political actors and the permanent public service.

CAPITAL ADVANTAGE

The Master of Political Management takes full advantage of Carleton's location in the nation's capital. Based just down the road from Parliament Hill, the program offers 10-week internships with political parties, members of all levels of government, political associations, government relations firms and other relevant groups.

While the program is explicitly designed for those who intend to launch careers as staff to elected politicians, it is also valuable to those who may wish to work for organizations and agencies that seek to influence government policy and priorities, whether these be NGOs, public or private sector companies, or grassroots movements.

The Master of Political Management will help you cultivate a set of skills appropriate to working as a political manager, strategist and advocate.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

Applicants must have a bachelor's degree (or equivalent) with an average of B+ or higher. You must be able to show evidence of your commitment to and aptitude for political management through prior involvement in party or campus politics, grassroots organizations, political advocacy, or similar experience.

APPLICATION & DEADLINES

For more information, please visit: carleton.ca/politicalmanagement.

Details about how to apply are available at: graduate.carleton.ca/apply-online.

You can access the online application at: graduate.carleton.ca/applynnow.

All applicants must submit their completed application by February 1.

An integral part of the one-year program is a 10-week internship in which students observe and participate in the political process.

“ The program provided me with invaluable insights into the political process, further developed my skills and opened doors in the industry in a way my previous involvement failed to do. I think this is reflective of the holistic way the program approaches political management. I couldn't be more pleased. ”

— Ihor Korbabicz, MPM/12

“ I recommend this program to anyone who is interested in politics and/or government. The highlight for me was the internship that provided a blend of application and theory to get a real hands-on experience. ”

— Chris Waterston, MPM/12

LANGUAGE REQUIREMENTS

Applicants must demonstrate a high level of fluency in English. Those who intend to work in Canadian federal politics should have or develop a facility in French. You can find more information about Carleton's English-language criteria at: graduate.carleton.ca/international.

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

As the Master of Political Management is an intensive professional undertaking in which students are expected to commit themselves fully to their studies, the program will not provide financial support in the form of teaching assistantships. Instead, all full-time students admitted to the program will be automatically considered for entrance scholarships.
